The View
From My Window
WITH PASTOR JOEL

I was walking the dog the other night when she pulled back as if afraid of what was ahead. I tugged her along until I figured out what she was balking at. There was a very loud party going on in someone's backyard. The music could be heard for blocks in every direction. I wondered how late the party would last since it was already fairly late in the evening, but I was thankful that the noise was far enough from our house that it wouldn't be an issue for us.

I wondered if it was a block party where all the neighbors were invited, or if it was a closed guestlist for a graduation or wedding. I pitied anyone in the area trying to do anything but dance. Also, on my pity list was anyone not feeling well particularly if they had a headache.

Some people have very little consideration for others & apparently you can gather a whole group of people together who have no consideration for anyone else. We spend a lot of time thinking about how everyone else's behaviors affect us; perhaps we need to pause every so often to consider just how we are affecting them. The golden rule is a great place to start: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."
