The View
From My Window
WITH PASTOR JOEL

Back in the day the activity bus from our school only went so far. The closest stop to my house was three miles away. Around 6pm I'd drag my weary bones off that bus onto the tarmac of a small gas station. It was dark & extremely cold at 6pm through the winter months. If Dad wasn't already waiting for me, it wouldn't be long until I'd see his little yellow bug coming up around the corner. Dad got home from work at 5pm. He liked to have supper then sit in the living room & watch the news. I'm sure there were many a night when he would have rather stayed slumped in his easy chair after a long day at work than make one more trip out into the weather ... but he always came.

What makes this story unusual is that my Dad's father died when Dad was quite young. I hear that my grandfather died in a bar fight which has a lot to say about that man's character. His position in the family was filled by a stepfather that made Cinderella's stepmother look like an angel. Eventually that man committed suicide. So, you see, my Dad never had anything but nasty role models when it came to fatherhood. His stepdad often sent him out into the cold without a jacket just to be mean. My Dad did everything he could to keep me sheltered & warm. What's a man like that worth? I can't count that high.
