The View from My Window

with Pastor Joel

Two of my Dad's favorite sayings when I was a child were, "You're driving me nuts!" and "You're making me a nervous wreck!" It wasn't always directed at me, I had help from my brother and two sisters. That's what families do: they irritate and unnerve each other. Sometimes we're driven to say things we'd rather never need to say. Somehow, we end up loving one another dearly and collecting a lot of wonderful memories!

Probably no one is more responsible for helping us become who we are than the people with whom we grow up. Their good qualities set an example for us to follow and their faults help us highlight traits we need to avoid.

In the process of that developing we can often feel like they're not really trying to help us, they're actually trying to drive us insane. Rarely is that the case. We're just people being people. That carries over into the church. Even with a purpose to love one another and an effort to help others develop a Christ-like character we can be somewhat irritating.

As Paul models for us in today's text, maybe, sometimes, the right thing to do is to let others know they're driving you loony.
