The View from My Window

With Pastor Joel

When it comes to training children we're supposed to expect them to take on more responsibility for their own care as they get older. They start brushing their own teeth, combing their own hair, getting dressed by themselves, etc. If we're good at this training stuff they eventually start cleaning their own room and ultimately doing their own laundry. We weren't that good at training our kids but I'm happy to report they turned out to be great adults.

I followed my Dad's example when it came to training kids. I did the chores: washed dishes, mowed the lawn, took out the trash until my kids wanted to be like me. I never pushed much, I just made it look like the mature thing to do. The question has often been asked, "When does a man know he's become a man?" My answer would be: when you do the things that need to be done without looking around to see who notices or expect some sort of a reward for doing them.

When I was younger, I used to be offended when I had to do things others were supposed to do. Now I consider it an honor to help someone else out. There is a joy in serving but it only comes with maturity. How mature are you?
