The View from My Window

With Pastor Joel

While I was working on this article, I became drowsy. I tried to push through but wasn't getting anywhere so I decided to throw my feet up onto my desk, lean back in my chair and catch a few minutes sleep. I went almost immediately into a dream where I was taking my wife to a store where they sell beauty products. She was looking for some nail polish. Once we got inside the building there was a desk where a lady interviewed her about what kind of nail polish she was looking for. After a lengthy discussion, they ushered us around the corner where there was display after display after display filled with beauty products where Barb could search until she found exactly what she wanted. My knees grew weak and I felt a little nauseous. The lady told me I was welcome to recline on a sofa at one end of the room. I leaned back on that couch and woke up back in my office! Thank God I was delivered from that nightmare!

What's that got to do with today's topic? Jesus died to save us. In Heaven men don't have to visit beauty supply stores. Those, my fellow husbands, exist only in the land of eternal torment in eternity. If I were you, I'd make sure things were right between me and God as soon as possible.
